

Yemi leads the firm's criminal litigation department, having cut her teeth with the Plateau State Ministry of Justice, dealing with matters ranging from fraud to land grabbing and homicide. She has an inquisitive and explorative mind which she brings to bear in the firm's litigation work, many times unearthing the weaknesses in the other party's argument thereby leading to early resolution of matters.

Yemi is also assistant editor of the firm's EazyLaw series and compiles the digest of Bills being debated in the National Assembly monitoring their progress and highlighting those which are most likely to affect commercial and public law practice. She has, by virtue of this role, kept abreast of latest significant court decisions and the law.
